Walk with Harry Owens, on his Burundian adventure

Harry Owens is the Islands own octogenarian adventurer! He is embarking on the adventure of a lifetime, which will change lives for generations to come. Harry is in Burundi on the 20th of February to the 11th of March 2019.

This exhibition is a mixture of local Manx Art, Burundian art, beekeeping and project information. It is designed for the visitor to walk with Harry on his mission, supporting him in prayer.

Harry the Island's bee disease officer is going to train over 300 female beekeepers, as well as groups of youths in how to make beehives & the protective clothing. With this training he is empowering the women to change their lives, to add nutrition to their diet and additional funds to pay for essential items like school and education.

By Harry imparting his gift of 50 years of education and practice, the cooperatives will be able to produce their own nutritious honey, supplementing the poor diets, selling any excess.
